Short Description of Site:

This three-bay by one-bay gable roofed church is representative of late nineteenth century rural vernacular church architecture; it has been vinyl sided. The church yard in front with its flanking line of trees and adjacent open land, and grave yard to the side, with its mature trees, also help retain the nineteenth century atmosphere. The additions at the rear of the church have been sensitively placed so as to be minimally disruptive.

Criteria:

Arch. Significance - that quality which embodies the distinctive characteristics of a type, period, or method of construction, or that represent the work of a master, or that possess high artistic values, or that represent a significant and distinguishable entity whose component may lack individual distinction.

Historical Significance - that quality present in sites associated with events that have made a significant contribution to the broad patterns of our history; or that are associated with the lives of persons significant in our past; or that have yielded, or may be likely to yield, information important in history.

Arch. Integrity - determined by the number of architectural changes to the site...using the following list as a guide...(and) noting other unusual changes.

Detrimental Changes (depending on the quality of its original character):

- ___ new or relocated chimney
- ___ rebuilt foundation
- ___ new porch
- ___ original windows changed (at a later, but still historical, date)
- ___ modern windows in original frames
- ___ original windows intact but extra ones added
- ___ change in shape or size of window openings
- ___ lack of outbuildings
- ___ aluminum siding (unless original architraves and trim are retained)
- ___ asphalt or asbestos siding (over original siding)
- ___ recent change of location

Critical Changes:

- ___ aluminum siding added; architraves eliminated
- ___ additions engulfing or removing portions of original building

Value Descriptions

Outstanding - distinguished; of particular import. to Md. historic & arch. past.

Considerable - deserving of recognition; contributes to the understanding of history or architectural heritage represented in Maryland

Moderate - commonality...lack of historic signif. or arch. style, except if scarce

Minor - unimportant or inferior; little arch. worth and absence of hist. importance

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

Significance: The church building itself is a good example of late nineteenth century rural vernacular church architecture. The church yard in front with its flanking line of trees and adjacent open land, and grave yard to the side, with its mature trees, also help retain the nineteenth century atmosphere. The additions at the rear of the church have been sensitively placed so as to be minimally disruptive.

Description: This is a three-bay by one-bay gable roofed church facing south. The windows have stationary transoms with four narrow horizontal rectangular lights over 9/9 double hung windows. The church has a field stone foundation and has been covered with white vinyl siding. Built in a simple, rural style with few exterior decorative elements, no trim was removed when the siding was added in the early 1970s; a small window over the entrance may have been covered at the time, however.<sup>1</sup>

The steeply pitched roof has green asphalt shingles. A small gabled entry pavilion contains the front door. A 1951 photograph in Our First One Hundred Years (p.8) shows a small, four pane, diamond-shaped window over the entrance; it may be covered by siding. The wooden door, which is stained, not painted, has architrave with asymmetrical molding, and a transom which has been filled in with boards. Mounted on a low stand outside the door of the church is a large bell bearing the words, "McShane Bell Foundry, Henry McShane and Co., Baltimore, Maryland, Trademark 1887".

The original interior of the church featured "plastering over wooden lath...broad floor boards and tongue-in-grove wainscotting" as well as a wood burning stove.<sup>2</sup> The church was electrified in 1939.

In 1969, the congregation renovated the interior of the sanctuary, removing the chimney in the middle of the east wall that served the stove, replacing the original pine pews with old oak benches, adding metal lathing and plasterboard to the wall behind the altar, and installing a lowered ceiling of acoustical tile. The double white-painted doors at the entrance to the chapel were replaced by stained oak.

In April of 1979, a fire in the basement of the education building caused smoke damage to the chapel and shattered its old windows. Because it was difficult to find replacement windows of the same size, small stationary transoms were added to each window so that the original opening could be retained. Existing walls of lath and plaster were covered with wallboard and the acoustical ceiling tile was removed. In addition, existing interior steel rods were encased in wood to look like beams.<sup>3</sup> In 1985, the sanctuary roof was replaced using the same type of material which had been previously used.

The church yard to the east is filled with large trees and retains its grave yard with original head stones. Prominent local families, such as the Van Horns, are buried here. Argyle Club Drive has been closed off by new construction, but still leads to the church, with a row of mature trees dividing it from an adjacent golf course. From the front approach, the setting for the church still retains much of its original character.

The rear of the building has had a series of additions to accommodate growing needs. These additions are built lower on the hill so that they do not overwhelm the church. A two-story gabled addition has been placed perpendicular to the church at its rear, connected by a two-bay hallway with a shed roof. Added in 1940 and used for educational purposes, the cinder block addition has metal casement windows and a large rectangular chimney through the low-pitched roof. A second addition, added in 1970 to provide classroom and kitchen facilities, is perpendicular to the first and has a cinder block first story which is partially in the ground and an aluminum sided upper story. It also has awning windows with three horizontal lights and a stove pipe protrudes through the low-pitched roof.

Beside these attached additions, there is a portable classroom in the fenced play yard for the school, as well as a storage shed. An asphalted parking lot abuts the buildings in the rear.

The congregation plans to erect a new church and education building at the same location, but the existing chapel will be retained; the more recent additions to the chapel may be demolished, however.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The Oak Chapel United Methodist Church (which celebrated its centennial in 1986) is significant because it is representative of the small vernacular late nineteenth century country churches which once dotted the Montgomery County landscape and it has been a center of community life in the Layhill area for over a hundred years.

1. Historic Period Theme(s): Religion
2. Geographic Organization: Piedmont (Montgomery County)
3. Development Period: Industrial/Urban Dominance 1870-1930 A.D.
4. Resource Type(s): Church

The church is located on part of an original land grant called "Lahill" given to James Beall by Archibald Edmonston on August 6, 1716.<sup>1</sup> As an earlier survey noted:

"Oak Chapel began its life as the Lay Hill Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at a time when many Montgomery County M.E. Churches were fragmenting locally over the issues which had caused a schism in the national churches a generation earlier. A structure was already on the property when the Lay Hill Church recorded its incorporation papers on October 26, 1886.<sup>2</sup> The original Board of Trustees was composed of George Bonifant, Andrew Johnson Cashell, John George Yewel Cashell, James William Godfrey, and Bennett Rufus Wilkerson. Immediately afterward, Basil Mullican conveyed to the Board of Trustees, for the sum of five dollars, 107 square perches of land together with the improvements thereof

'for proper use and benefit in fee simple so long as it shall be used as a place of divine worship; but to revert to the grantor, his heirs or assigns when or as soon as its (sic) ceases to be so used.'"<sup>3,4</sup>

An additional three acres was purchased in 1955.

According to the accounts of a descendant of Basil Mullican, the building of the church was a community effort, with fieldstone for the foundation collected by ox cart from nearby fields, timber felled and donated by George Bonifant Sr. from his land, and the boards made at a local saw mill. The cornerstone was laid on April 10, 1887.<sup>5</sup>

The church has been a center of community life for area residents since its establishment and is still used for community and organizational meetings. In the early years,

"People came to worship from near and far - as far away as Derwood - by horse and buggy, team and wagon, horseback or on foot. Often the entire...Sunday was spent going around to the different churches...for preaching, singing, or meetings. Attending church, then as now, was a social opportunity as well as spiritual nourishment."<sup>6</sup>

Church membership reflected the growth of the surrounding community as well as certain national trends, like the economic depression of the 1930s. Attendance was very low in the late 1930s, but the church was never officially closed. Membership grew in the years after World War II, as the surrounding community changed from rural to suburban in character.

At the time of the incorporation of the Lay Hill Church in 1886, the ME Church at Colesville was already 20 years old, having been established in 1866 as the Andrew Chapel Methodist Episcopal Church South. The Lay Hill and Colesville churches were part of a circuit of approximately twelve ME Churches which were served by a horseback-riding pastor until 1904, when the three-point "Colesville Charge" was established, with Lay Hill, Four Corners (now Marvin Memorial) and Colesville sharing a minister. From 1943 until 1947, Lay Hill was part of a two-point "Colesville Charge", and, in 1947, a student minister was appointed to serve the church.<sup>7</sup>

In 1968, the Lay Hill Methodist Church recorded Articles of Amendment to change its name to Oak Chapel Methodist Church.<sup>8</sup> The actual vote to change had been taken 20 years earlier, in 1948, when the congregation became concerned that it would be confused with the Lay Hill Free Methodist Church on Bonifant

The Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and the Methodist Protestant Church united in 1939, and the words "Episcopal" and "South" were dropped from the Church name at that time. The word "United" was added in 1965 to mark the unification of the Methodist and Evangelical United Brethren Churches.<sup>9</sup>

The date of establishment of the church cemetery is unknown, and no records of the grave sites have been located; the oldest grave marker is dated 1873. It appears that the cemetery site was dedicated by the Mullican family for use by the poor. The cemetery was closed in the 1950's.<sup>10</sup> Tombstone inscriptions include:

For many years, Lay Hill Academy stood just to the north of the church. The Academy was one of several schools opened in the area after the passage of the Primary School Act of 1839, which established the first statewide guidelines for education. In 1859, the one-room school house which had been erected on the half-acre property was deeded to the Montgomery County School Board. In 1890, the existing building was demolished and a new school house, approximately 22 by 36 feet in size, was built at a cost of $450. The school was closed in 1926 when Glenmont Elementary opened, and the building and land was sold to the Willson family. In February, 1945, both were purchased by the church. The school was used as a church kitchen until 1957, when it was demolished. "Local residents recall the school and the church in their setting of large oak trees, to which students and worshipers hitched their horses."<sup>11</sup>

The Lay Hill Community Hall also figured prominently in the history of the church. The Hall was a log structure which stood opposite the church on the other side of Layhill Road; the exact dates of its construction and demolition are unknown. The Ladies Aid and Missionary Society (later the WSCS) used the building for church dinners from approximately 1914 to 1923.<sup>12</sup>

Local residents recall the school and church in their setting of large oak trees, to which students and worshippers hitched their horses. An annual ham-and-oyster church supper in the fall and the presence of long-time members add to the continuity of community traditions. In 1968, the Lay Hill Methodist Church changed its name to Oak Chapel Methodist Church.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This one bay by three bay, one and a half story chapel sits on a triangular piece of land between two roads, surrounded by oak trees, facing south.

Built on fieldstone foundations, the church now has white aluminum siding. The south gabled projecting pavilion is one story. The double wooden paneled south doors open into the pavilion. There is a large addition on the north elevation built into the side of a hill. This addition has cinderblock foundations and white aluminum siding. There is a small lean-to addition on the east elevation at the north corner. A glass and wooden paneled door opens into the lean-to giving access to both the chapel and the north addition.

There are six over six double hung windows. The intersecting gable roofs have green asbestos shingles.

The south door opens into a small entry room. The doorway into the chapel is surmounted by a three light transom. The central aisle is flanked on the east by seven oak pews and on the west by nine oak pews. The altar area is raised up one step at the north end. The simple oak altar is against the north wall. To the east is the organ and on the east side, just south of the organ is the simple oak podium.

There are broad floor boards. There is tongue and groove wainscoting with plaster over lath walls. The ceiling has acoustical tiles with recessed lights.

The present sanctuary is the oldest part of the chapel. There have been two additions. The original window glass, wainscoting and floors have been preserved. One spot on the floor between pews bears the burns from the woodburning stove used to heat the chapel when it was only one room.

Adjacent to the chapel is the cemetery. Sample tombstone inscriptions:

Largest stone of family plot surrounded by old dogwoods....

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Oak Chapel/Layhill Church is representative of the small Victorian country churches which once dotted Montgomery County's landscape.

Oak Chapel began its life as the Lay Hill Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at a time when many Montgomery County M.E. Churches were fragmenting locally over the issues which had caused a schism in the national churches a generation earlier. A structure was already on the property when the Lay Hill Church recorded its incorporation papers on October 26, 1886.<sup>1</sup> The original Board of Trustees was composed of George Bonifant, Andrew Jackson Cashell, John George Yewel Cashell, James William Godfrey, and Bennett Rufus Wilkerson. Immediately afterward, Basil Mullican conveyed to the Board of Trustees, for the sum of five dollars, 107 square perches of land, together with the improvements thereof.

"for proper use and benefit in fee simple so long as it shall be used as a place of divine worship; but to revert to the grantor, his heirs or assigns when or as soon as its (sic) ceases to be so used."<sup>2</sup>

For many years (approximately 1865-1925), Lay Hill School stood just to the north of the Church. Local residents recall the school and the church in their setting of large oak trees, to which students and worshippers hitched their horses. The Autumn ham-and-oyster Church supper and the presence of long-time members, such as Frank Willson (whose family has lived nearby for seven generations), add to the continuity of community traditions.

In 1968, the Lay Hill Methodist Church recorded Articles of Amendment to change the name of the church to Oak Chapel Methodist Church.<sup>3</sup>

Lay Hill Methodist Episcopal Church, South (Oak Chapel)

The Montgomery Journal, Wednesday, April 18, 1979

Fire Damages Old Oak Chapel Church

Firefighters (left) check out the pews in the historic Oak Chapel United Methodist Church in Layhill early Saturday following a two-alarm blaze that damaged mostly the basement and ceiling. At right, Glen Dameron, the pastor, watches the fire which may have begun with a short circuit. Easter services moved to the nearby Wheaton Seventh-Day Adventist Church because of extensive smoke and water damage to the sanctuary. The church, which is next to the Argyle Country Club, will celebrate its 100th anniversary in 1986. Estimates put the damage at $50,000. Firemen from the Kensington, Hillandale and Sandy Spring fire departments responded shortly before 5:30 a.m. and had the situation under control before 6 a.m.
