Town or Vicinity in which Resource is Located: Travilah

Access: Private

This cemetery is located at the rear of a group of houses on Tobytown Drive. Approximately rectangular in form, the cemetery is surrounded by a chain link fence and contains about two dozen scattered reddish sandstones, which may be headstones or footstones. The Tobytown Cemetery is the only historical resource remaining connected with the early black kinship community of Tobytown. All other structures associated with Tobytown were demolished in the early 1970s and replaced with a townhouse community - in which descendants of many of Tobytown's original families still live. The cemetery contains the remains of former slaves and their descendants.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Tobytown Cemetery is located at the rear (north) of a group of houses on Tobytown Drive, with the eastern end of the cemetery located behind 12649 Tobytown Drive. River Road is adjacent and parallel to the north boundary of the cemetery.

Approximately rectangular in form, and running east-west, the cemetery is surrounded by a chain link fence, with entrance through a gate at the southwest corner. At the time of the site visit (12/93), the cemetery was clear of underbrush and what appeared to be grave-stones were clearly visible.

There are about two dozen scattered red sandstones which may be headstones or footstones. The stones are generally small, irregular in shape, and without inscription. The only stone with recognizable markings is a small stone leaning against the base of a tree, which reads, "Marrishh, b. --- 27, 1888, d. --- 2, 1890." Another notable stone is large and rectangular, lying flat on the ground, with no visible inscription.

A number of stones are grouped near a tree with a triple trunk located near the fence on the north side of the cemetery. Other smaller trees are scattered throughout the site.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

Summary: The Tobytown Cemetery is the only historical resource left connected with this black community which is still active, though small. The cemetery contains the remains of former slaves and their descendants.

The community known as Tobytown was established by William Davis, Ailsie Martin, and Emory Genus. Davis was given four acres of land by John and Susan Rouzee (for consideration of $8.00) in 1875. According to a grandson, Davis was a Tennessee native who was an emancipated slave working on a Seneca vicinity farm at the time of purchase. Martin and Genus bought a five-acre parcel from the Rouzees for $100. The land was part of a tract known as Brackenridge.<sup>1</sup>

Pennyfield Lock Road, which runs from River Road to the C&O Canal, was known at this time as Warehouse Road, Muddy Branch Warehouse Road or DuFief Warehouse Road. John L. DuFief operated a warehouse along the canal by 1865.

The cemetery is located on the parcel which was owned by Ailsie Martin. By 1878, Tobias Martin had a residence in this vicinity. Emory Genus lived on the opposite side of Pennyfield Lock Road (southeast). Two story house shown in aerial photo.<sup>2</sup> William Davis lived west on River Road, near Muddy Branch. Supplies were available at the store located approximately three-quarters of a mile down the road, at the canal lock.<sup>3</sup>

In 1887, Ailsie Martin dedicated a small parcel of land "for the purpose of erecting a meeting house or place of worship for the colored Baptist congregation worshipping in the neighborhood of Travillah." The original church burned by 1917. A later church, probably on the same lot, was located directly west of the intersection of River and Pennyfield Lock Roads.<sup>4</sup> This was one of the few black Baptist churches in the upper county. The church and lot were claimed by the Department of Public Works when River Road was widened in 1956.<sup>5</sup> Methodist residents of Tobytown attended Union Wesley Methodist Church, which was located at the corner of Piney Meetinghouse Road and Piney Glen Lane.<sup>6</sup>

Among those believed to be buried in cemetery:

Charles Davis (d1914), father of Henson Davis (born c1893)<sup>7</sup>

Grandfather of Henson's wife<sup>8</sup>

Henson's [older?] brother (William Davis Jr?)

Henson's son

Most graves were unmarked.

Tobytown was a small kinship community. Many of the residents still related today. Unlike most other black communities, Tobytown residents, for the most part, did not form ties with other communities. The closest black communities were Berryville, Seneca, and The Pines (near Piney Meetinghouse and Glen Roads). Little physical evidence is left of these other communities.

School classes were held in the first church. The community requested its own school in 1917, after the church burned, but it was never built. After construction of the second church, it undoubtedly was also used for classes. By the early 20th century, most other black communities had their own school building, however inadequate, and many, unlike Tobytown, had a post office.<sup>9</sup>

Through the late 19th and early 20th centuries, residents worked on surrounding farms as laborers, domestics, cooks, and gardeners. In the second quarter of the 20th century, the community began to suffer. The Potomac area underwent a transformation from working farms to exclusive estates. The demand for rural labor dropped off significantly and residents were unable to acquire the skills needed for a changing job market.

Over the next 25 years, the standard of living dropped and living conditions declined. In 1965, the community was impoverished. The majority of the seventy-five residents lived without benefit of electricity, indoor plumbing, or garbage collection. meals were prepared on wood stoves, drinking and cooking water came from a single well, and sanitary facilities consisted of one outdoor privy.<sup>10</sup>

The original Tobytown houses were smaller than most other post-Civil War era black settlements where two story houses with two floors per level as the norm. Only one two story house stood in Tobytown.<sup>11</sup> The other fourteen houses were single story structures of one, two and three rooms each. In these houses lived 21 families consisting of 38 adults and 33 children living in 15 houses.

In 1967, the Montgomery County Council designated Tobytown an urban renewal area. Tobytown Development Corporation appointed, consisting of residents, interested citizens, and government staff. Housing plan approved by HUD in 1972.

Today, Tobytown is a community of approximately 125 people living on 16.34 acres of land. Twenty six brick and wood Shed Style townhouses, ranging in size from one bedroom to six bedrooms, were constructed in 1972, replacing the original houses.<sup>12</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Rouzee may have been Davis' former master, since he gave him the land while selling the other parcel to Davis and Genus. Henson Davis recalled that Tobytown land was formerly "part of the Riley Farm." Ann Harris, History of Potomac, 77. STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This was reportedly a slave graveyard over 100 years ago. This is apparently one of the older Negro communities in the County. Maps indicate free blacks had established a settlement here between 1865 and 1878. At that latter date, several families had erected homes here, including members of the Martin and Davis families.
